How the letters of intent work

Template written in plain language. It is not legal advice and has not been reviewed by a lawyer. Each side should have its own counsel read it before signing.

What a letter of intent is

A letter of intent (LOI) is a short, mostly non-binding letter that says two sides intend to work together and on what terms. It shows serious interest. It is not a contract to pay and it does not move money.

The five documents in this pack

- 01 Design-Partner LOI: for a company that will try Kaldrix and Zentrix on one real workflow in test mode, for free, for 90 days.
- 02 Integration-Partner LOI: for payment providers, banks and platforms who want to explore connecting their rails or product.
- 03 Paid Pilot Terms: a one-page outline of a paid pilot on one real workflow. Use it after a design-partner stage goes well.
- 04 Mutual NDA: sign this before sharing source code, security reports or any private workflow.
- 05 Investor Indication of Interest: a non-binding note from an investor saying they would like to take a closer look. It is not an offer or a commitment.

The order to use them

- First call: no paper needed. Send the design-partner page and the demo video.
- If they want to try it: send 01 (or 02 for a provider) and, if they want to share anything private, 04.
- After four weeks in test mode: review call. If it went well, send 03.
- Investors: 05 only after they have asked for it. Do not send it unasked.

Before you send anything

- Fill in the legal entity name and place of registration. If the company is not registered yet, do not send these; sign as an individual only on advice from a lawyer.
- Have a lawyer read them once. They are written to be fair to both sides so that a partner's lawyer reads them quickly.
- Read the status line aloud to yourself: a test service, pretend bank, no real money, no independent security review. Never promise more than that.

What to say when you send it

"Thank you for the call. I have attached a short, non-binding letter that records what we agreed: a 90-day test-mode trial on [[WORKFLOW]], free, no exclusivity, and either side can stop at any time. If it looks right, sign and return it and we will book the first working session."

What never to promise

- Real money moving, a live payment provider, or a security review that has not happened.
- A partnership with any named company that has not agreed in writing.
- Exclusivity, a price, or a delivery date you cannot meet.

- Using their name, logo or results in public without their written permission.

Tracking

Record every letter in the LOI tracker (LOI-tracker.csv): who, what was sent, when, when signed, and what happens next.
